MARQUIS™

INSPIRATION:

The National Center for Civil and Human Rights is a museum of experiences rather than objects. The exterior is composed of two curved walls, which resemble interlocking arms, cradling the building's glass-paneled central core and conveying the ideals of unity and equality for all. Incorporating the graceful form of the architecture that inspired it, the Marquis bathtub mirrors the artful curves of the building in the refined simplicity of its sloped shape. The Marquis balances exquisite symmetry with the unexpected, as the ever-so-slight tilt to its rim adds interest and draws the eye. Shaped to resemble cupped hands that cradle you as you relax and reflect, the Marquis defines design excellence.
