VENTILATION: PROFESSIONAL SERIES

Get the Look: 30" Proline Vent Hood in Stainless Steel

Choosing the Perfect Range Hood

Everything You Need to Know

1. Select a Hood Style

Classic, Modern, Contemporary, Farmhouse, choose a hood style that fits best fits with your overall kitchen design.

2. Select Hood Width

The hood should be the same width as the cooking appliance below it, or up to 6" wider for maximum capture area.

3. Determine Total Hood Height

Ventilation Hoods should be installed 30" – 36" above the cooktop surface. Duct covers can fill any remaining space that the hood does not. See page 74 to determine if a duct cover is needed based on your ceiling height.

4. Calculate Hood Power Needed

Hood power is based on CFMs. To determine the CFMs needed, add the total BTU's of your cooking appliance (top burners + ovens), then divide by 150.

5. Choose Blower Type

In-hood, In-line and Remote blowers are available from 600 CFM's up to 1,400 CFM's.

6. Determine Blower Location

Your hood needs to exhaust through ducting which may be determined by existing ducting or architectural plans for a new build. First decide if this will occur through the top or rear of the hood. Then, install the correct size ducting for the shortest possible distance with the least 90 degree bends possible.

7. Customize Your Kitchen

Choose from over 1,000+ colors, finishes and designer metals. Accent with unlimited strapping configurations.

DUCT COVER SELECTION GUIDE

All measurements are to be calculated in inches

(30" min. to 36" max)

Section 4: Distance Between Floor and Countertop _____

Height of Duct Cover Needed: _____

* Ceiling height may be impacted by crown molding and/or soffit above the hood. Please account for this when calculating available floor to ceiling height
